Anythink to host community roundtables

Dialogues serve as opportunity to gather public insight

THORNTON, Colo.–June 5, 2017–Anythink invites the community to participate in two upcoming public roundtable discussions on shaping the future of Adams County. The events, which will be held on Thursday, July 20 at Anythink Huron Street and Saturday, July 22 at Anythink Wright Farms, will serve as an opportunity for anyone to voice their thoughts and dreams on what makes a successful community. As the county continues to experience rapid growth, these discussions will provide insight as to the different ways in which the county can help support the needs and wants of Adams County residents. The ideas gathered from these roundtables will help Anythink focus its future initiatives and grow as a community hub.

“As Adams County grows, this is an opportunity to participate in creating our future – for our community and our library,” says Anythink Director Pam Sandlian Smith. “First, we create a vision. Then, we work towards accomplishing that vision collaboratively.”

The roundtable discussions are free and open to the public.
